

Introduction: Congratulations on your purchase of the Accell UltraRun 1.3 cable. Accell UltraRun 1.3 cables are designed to provide up to 1080p high-resolution transmission over long cable runs of up to 25 meters. The cable's built-in technology regenerates the digital signal before sending it to the display. The innovative removable repeater design allows easy replacement of an inoperable repeater module without having to disrupt the long cable run.

Note: If running the cable in a wall, please connect the cable to the hardware to ensure successful operation before installing the cable within the wall. To prevent damage to the HDMI screw connector, when pulling the long cable length through the wall it is recommended not pull the side with HDMI screw connector. Pull the HDMI connector on the cable side that will connect to the video source.

Setup: Remove the protective plug from the repeater modules power jack. Plug the included power adapter into the cable and then into an active power outlet. Remove the protective covers from each of the HDMI connectors. Connect the long cable length to the video source. Connector the short cable length labeled "To Display" to the display.

Includes:

- UltraRun 1.3 Cable with repeater module
- Power adapter
- Instruction manual with warranty

Troubleshooting: If the cable fails to operate (no picture on the display) please check the status of the cable's LED light. The LED Light "On" is the normal operating condition.

- A: Ensure the source device (example: DVD player) and display are plugged in and turned on.
B: Ensure the long cable is plugged into the video source. It should be connected and screwed tightly to the repeater module. The booster end of the cable marked "To Display" must be connected to the display.
C: The cable may not be getting enough power. Check that the power adapter is plug into an active outlet.
